

A Letter to Dad

Based on a true story, this recent released movie and DVD is about A man named Dan Donovan and a 27 page letter written to his estranged father. From the Website alettertodad.com, the following:

The original film was completed in 1994, shot on 35mm film and released internationally as "In the Living Years". Although it was made a decade before there was a "faith-based" film market, it quickly made back its original budget and even played theatrically in certain foreign countries.

Fast-forward to 2008... the faith-based market has exploded thanks to Mel Gibson's Passion of The Christ. While the Hollywood machine can't seem to get a handle on the market, filmmakers like the Kendrick brothers (Fireproof, Facing the Giants) the LaLonde's (Left Behind) and David A.R. White (Hidden Secrets, The Moment After) among others are proving that not only is the market viable, but movies with a message can actually have life-changing effects.

Thus, the movie has been remade with the advertisement as shown below:
